

RENAISSANCE STUDIES NOW

“OLD MARGINS & NEW CENTERS”

Two Roundtables

April 29, 2019, 10AM & 3PM

Please join us for two roundtables with early career scholars doing exciting work, exploring new frontiers, and bringing new energy to Renaissance and early modern studies.

SPEAKERS INCLUDE: Ari Friedlander (University of Mississippi), Tomasz Grusiecki (Boise State University), Emin Lelić (Salisbury University), Shannon McHugh (University of Massachusetts, Boston), Olimpia E. Rosenthal (Indiana University, Bloomington) and Andrea Stevens (University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign).

10AM, ROUNDTABLE I: “Renaissance Studies NOW.” Presenters will give brief examples of the best work they do before we open for a general discussion of the state of the field.

3PM, ROUNDTABLE II: “Teaching the Renaissance NOW.” Mini-master classes where each presenter will share an example of how to make the study of the Renaissance relevant today, with a focus on one specific innovative approach or classroom tool.

COLLEGE ARTS & HUMANITIES INSTITUTE
1211 E. ATWATER AVENUE, BLOOMINGTON

This event is made possible through the support of the College Arts and Humanities Institute, the College of Arts and Sciences, the Mary-Margaret Barr Koon Fund of the Department of French and Italian, the Department of Comparative Literature, the Department of English, the Department of History, and the Department of Spanish and Portuguese.
